Capturing the essence of animal art from Anasazi pottery made 1,000 years ago, as well as the Kachina dolls of the Hopis, these special edition Buck 110s make a strikingly handsome series for collectors.

Inset into the golden oakwood handle of four Folding Hunters is a beautifully detailed inlaid mosaic 1 3/4-inch medallion with colorful symbols of a thunderbird, a quail, a scorpion and a Kachina doll. The medallion is accented with a brass oval outline.

The first knife in this new open series of Buck collectibles is scheduled for release in November 1997.

"Limited Time Only" Production Knives

Famous Folding Hunter with Variations!

Flick-It on the blade makes it easy to swing the blade open, using only one hand.

Liner-lock system means that this Folding Hunter can be unlocked and closed with one hand.

This new model is really an all-new knife. When you first see it, this new Buck knife looks a lot like the famous Folding Hunter. And the model number still has a 110 root; this one is Model 110LL. But consider all of these major variations, starting with the way it looks:

- Handle inlays are blue woodgrain.
- Bolsters are nickel-silver.
- New Flick-It makes it easy to open the 3 1/2" hollow-ground, satin-finish clip blade, with either left or right hand. For those who prefer the old way, there's a traditional nail-nick.
- Convenient liner-lock makes it easy to unlock and close with one hand.
- It comes with a brown, genuine leather sheath.
